ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech offense finally gave its defense some help, and No. 8 South Carolina clinched its early season win with a 34-0 victory over Georgia Tech.

The game plan was great and we just executed it. We knew we had to get some things going early to take some pressure off our defense," Rampkey said.

Carolina entered the game as a 15-point favorite, mainly because of its lightning defense that threatened to bury what had been until Saturday a sluggish Tech attack.

Carolina's defense, which had been until Saturday a sluggish Tech attack. "It was horrible," Carolina linebacker Mark McKernan said. "We were supposed to be one of the top defenses in the nation. We were one of the worst today."

Carolina fell to 1-1 for the year, ending its first winning streak since dropping a 24-0 decision at Georgia in 1981. Tech, 2-4, made it a miserable afternoon for Ellis, picking off four of his passes.
